FUNNY DEFINITIONS TASK

This task was first presented here:

> Nusbaum, E. C., Silvia, P. J., & Beaty, R. E. (2017). Ha ha? Assessing individual differences in humor production ability. Psychology of Aesthetics, Arts, and Creativity, 11, 231-241.

Note. People are given as much time as they like for each item, but it is worth measuring their response time. They are asked to come up with only one response. We have MediaLab randomize the order of the items, but this probably isn't essential. As with most cognitive lab tasks, it would be worth exploring variations in task parameters, response options, and instructions.

The actual noun-noun combinations are flexible and can be replaced to suit your population. We have used a lot over the years.

FUNNY DEFINITIONS

A classic form of humor is coming up with funny definitions for things. So, for this next task, you will be given an unusual noun and asked to come up with a funny definition for it, something that most people would find funny or silly. It's fine to be weird, silly, dirty, ironic, bizarre, or whatever, so long as it is funny.

For example, you might define PROFESSOR as "someone who talks in someone else's sleep."

On the next few pages, you will see three concepts. The task is to come up with a funny definition for each one---just press ENTER after writing your definition. There is no time limit.
